

Answers to Puzzles.

Some one has sent us the following answers to the mathematical puzzles published on the first page of the INTELLIGENCE last week: Answer to first puzzle—1st man's sheep, 5; 2nd man's sheep, 3; 3rd man's sheep, 2; 4th man's sheep, 1. Answer to second puzzle—Original property, 14 cts. Answer to third puzzle—Each son's share, $7,000. Answer to fourth puzzle—Grocer's entire stock, 31 eggs. The answer to the first puzzle is incorrect. Instead of having respectively 5 and 3 sheep the countrymen had 7 and 5. The answer to the second puzzle is also incorrect. The original property of the old man was 42 instead of 14 cents. The answers to the third and fourth puzzles are correct, though the third is not properly worked. We bid our unknown friend to try again.

The announcement of the death of the estimable gentleman whose name heads this article, will carry universal sorrow to the hearts of the people of Anderson County, by whom he was well and favorably known. The sad event occurred on last Sunday evening at 6 o'clock, in the 65th year of his age, at his residence in Hart County, Georgia, 10 miles from the town of Hartwell, and immediately on the Savannah River, where he was born and lived.

Mr. Sadler was one of the most honored and highly respected citizens of Hart County, and represented the County several years in the State Legislature with ability and to the satisfaction of his constituents. He was well known in this County as a gentleman of high character and fine business capacity, and was deservedly popular with all classes.

For many years prior to his death he was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and his remains were interred in the graveyard at Cokesbury Church, Hart County, on Monday afternoon, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, and were interred by Rev. Mr. Farris, of Hartwell.

Charleston and the G. & C. R. R. A recent order from the new management of the Greenville and Columbia Railroad to their agents not to give through bills of lading via Charleston has been the cause of alarm to some of the leading business men of that city, but Mayor Courtney, who is the agent at Charleston of the Atlantic Coast Steamers, who probably knows more about the business of the Clyde Co. than any other man in the State, and who is its immediate controlling officer, does not regard the order as a blow at the business interests of Charleston. Speaking of the matter to the G. & C. R. R. by Messrs. Clyde & Co., to a supporter of the News and Courier, Mr. Courtney says: "Charleston, the South Carolina Railroad, and every one in Charleston who was able to act for this city's interests could not, or else declined to act, and these conditions were well known in this State throughout the country. The only question then was, what other influence would get possession of the Greenville and Columbia Road? The Air Line Road was known as one competitor. Its construction had been felt as the heaviest blow ever given to the jobbing trade and steamship interests of Charleston, in its enormous diversion of travel and business along our Northern border, East and West. Messrs. Clyde & Co., having large real-estate interests in Charleston, determined to oppose the purchase of the Greenville and Columbia Road by the Air Line Railroad, and formed a combination, including myself, to control the sale, and to protect our steamship interests. I was at the time threatened at that time by an attempt to create a new combination by an active business man, representing a portion of the ship interests at this port. I was greatly interested in this movement, and did all I could to forward it. After all efforts failed to get Charleston and Railroad to take care of themselves, and I saw no other prospect ahead, outside of this, than the purchase of the Greenville and Columbia Railroad by the Air Line Railroad, and its entire alienation from Charleston. Against this result, so fatal, in my opinion, to the business interests of Charleston, I worked. If the Greenville and Columbia Railroad had to go from under our control it was better, in my opinion, to have it under the control of interests having a terminal point in steamship lines than to have it wholly separated from us. It was not what I would have preferred to do, but when Charleston and the South Carolina Road could or would do nothing for themselves, I was forced to do so."
